Olympian dad to son: 'Enjoy every minute'

Ottawa gathers to watch the Olympic kick-off festivities

Canadians gathered at Confederation Park Friday morning to cheer their Olympic team from afar during the opening ceremonies of the 2014 Games in Sochi.

Although chilly, the crowd waved flags and smiled at the big screen set up for a live broadcast of the event.

But no one was perhaps prouder than Ole Sorensen.

A former Olympic wrestler, Sorensen was eyeing the big screen for his son, Cody, who's in Sochi with Canada's bobsled team.

"I gave him two levels of advice, one as a dad," said the older Sorensen. "Enjoy every minute." This is a privilege that doesn't come around very often. The other is more coaching advice: "Stay focused, don't get distracted."

Elizabeth Manley, who won a silver medal at the 1988 Olympic Games, was also at the Confederation Park event, as was biathlete Caroline Bisson.

"It's like an adrenaline rush," said Manley. "It makes me feel 20 again. I know how they're all feeling. I know the excitement. I know what they're going through."

Across the road at city hall, the pride flag has been raised until the end of the Games.

Mayor Jim Watson said it's to send a message to the Russian government that its laws banning gay propaganda are "unacceptable."

"It's our way of saying our community support human rights and supports the dignity of all citizens, regardless of who they are and regardless of race, religion or sexual orientation," he said.

Steak sweeps ByWard Market Stew Cook Off

TREVOR GREENWAY

Twenty-four Ottawa restaurants battled it out for bragging rights Friday, all eyeing the ByWard Market Stew Cook Off trophy.

There was everything from Tandoori-style dishes and seafood chowders to bacon infused stews, but in the end, the celebrity judges played it safe, choosing a classic French-style stew from Steak Restaurant as the winner.

Steak's Beef Brisket with Double Smoked Bacon and Red Wine Stew was near perfect. A well-balanced gravy with a hint of smoke made the stew stand out on the judges' palates.

"It's a pretty classic-style French stew, but I made a little play on it with smoking the brisket and using double-smoked bacon," said Steak sous chef Paul Brennan. "You can taste the love in it and it was just a well-thought-out stew and we put a lot of time into it."

Judge and renowned food critic Gay Cook was one of the toughest to impress. She didn't give any stew a perfect score and critiqued many of the textures.

"A very important thing is that you do not overcook it," said Cook. "You need to bring it out absolutely and keep it at that temperature so that it doesn't continue cooking. A lot of the stews actually fell apart because they were overcooked."

The judges, which also included this Metro reporter and Ottawa police Chief Charles Bordeleau, all seemed to enjoy the Fish Market Restaurant's seafood chowder with its protein punch of smoked bacon, tilapia, crab, shrimp and clams. It didn't win over the judges, but chef Tania Budd's creation gets Metro's vote.

Typically a meat-and-potatoes type guy, Bordeleau was surprised by the seafood chowder and all of the creations — all 14 bowls that he ate.

"They are all good; they have different tastes," he said. "We have seafood, we have beef, we have pork, sausage.... I am enjoying all of them."

Free Wi-Fi coming to 25 City of Ottawa buildings

IceNet Wireless CEO Kalai Kalaichelvan LUCY SCHOLEY/METRO

The city is bringing in wireless Internet to 25 of its facilities, from the Bob MacQuarrie Recreation Complex in Orleans to the Kanata Leisure Centre. Smartphone users will also be able to log onto free Wi-Fi in the ByWard Market Building and Ben Franklin Place.

Mayor Jim Watson announced the five-year partnership with Ottawa-based IceNet Wireless on Friday morning at city hall.

"We are playing catch-up, but I think this announcement brings us to the lead of the pack because this is an arrangement that doesn't cost taxpayers money," he told reporters.

IceNet will also generate $315,000 in revenue for the city through advertising. It will set up video screens at its locations — including city hall, which will use the screens to broadcast the Olympic Games.

"I can tell you the many times I've been at a rink, a pool or here at city hall and I've been asked, 'When are we ever gonna get Wi-Fi?'" said Tim Tierney, councillor and chair of the information technology sub-committee.

Kalai Kalaichelvan, the CEO of IceNet, said he wants to make Ottawa "Wi-Fi hot."

"We believe that we are literally upgrading the city," he said.

IceNet is a division of EION Inc., which has been in business for 12 years. Seventy per cent of its products are exported internationally, said Kalaichelvan. They also have business in Newfoundland and are hoping to take IceNet across the country.

Hang-glider pilot pleads guilty in woman's death

A former British Columbia hang-glider pilot whose passenger fell 300 metres to her death during a flight that was an anniversary gift pleaded guilty Friday to criminal negligence causing death.

William Jon Orders was charged in the death of 27-year-old Lenami Godinez-Avila, who plunged from Orders' hang-glider shortly after takeoff during a flight above B.C.'s Fraser Valley in April 2012.

Orders was also charged with obstruction of justice over allegations he swallowed a memory card that may have contained video of the incident.

Crown and defence lawyers submitted a joint proposal for a sentence of five months, followed by a probation order of three years.

The Hang Gliding and Paragliding Association of Canada investigated the accident and concluded Godinez-Avila's harness was not attached to the glider during takeoff. The investigation also concluded Orders didn't perform a pre-launch safety check.

Orders apologized the following month for his "panicked" actions, admitting to swallowing the card and explaining in a prepared statement that he had co-operated to ensure police recovered it.

Godinez-Avila was a Mexican studying in B.C. The hang-gliding experience was planned as a celebration of her and her boyfriend's two-year anniversary. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rob Ford orders staff to remove gay-pride flag

'Let Russia do what they want.' Toronto mayor's remarks about rainbow flag at city hall blasted as 'thinly veiled homophobia'

Toronto's controversial mayor has ordered city staff to take down a rainbow flag that was raised outside city hall Friday in support of gay rights as the Olympic Games begin in Sochi, saying he wants to see the Canadian flag raised instead.

"This is about the Olympics. This is about being patriotic to your country. This is not about someone's sexual preference," he said.

When told the gesture was meant to protest anti-gay laws in Russia, Ford replied: "Let Russia do what they want. We're Canadians here."

At least one city councillor agreed with the mayor.

Richard: Mark, there are a few movies that stop me in my tracks every time. I'm not sure how many times I have come across The Godfather on television and thought to myself, "I'll just watch this for five minutes." By the time it gets to the "Leave the gun ... take the cannoli," scene I'm hooked and any plans I may have had for the day are out the window. Another movie that makes time stand still for me is The Party. You cannot call yourself a film fan and not have laughed hysterically at Peter Sellers slinging a Cornish game hen from a dinner plate to the tiara of a well-dressed dinner guest. What movies keep you inside?

Mark: The Godfather is indeed a game changer for any plans you might have made for the day. But why stop there? Why not watch the whole trilogy in one shot? Eight hours of shoot-

Anywhere, anytime movies

The Reel Guys know that there's lots to do outside. We've heard talk of skating, tobogganing and snowshoeing. But who are we kidding? The closest we come to outdoor activity is a night at the drive-in, and we'd say it's a bit chilly to sit in the car and watch movies. These cold temperatures along with our aversion to frostbite means we spend a lot of time at home watching movies, or in theatres seeing the latest flicks. Here is a list of films we'd watch anytime, especially when the mercury hits -273°C .

ings, garrotings, betrayals, screaming, and plotting will get you ready for when the spouse and kids get home. I like theme-based programming. I'm looking forward to a triple bill of Schindler's List, They Shoot Horses, Don't They?, and Leaving Las Vegas, with a razor blade resting on a silver tray, just in case.

RC: I don't mind a theme night but mine doesn't usually involve razor blades. When I want to get bloody, I watch Quentin Tarantino films. I can watch Pulp Fiction any old time, but for variety sake, I usually theme his flicks in terms of their revenge, murder and drug content. It goes something like this: Pulp Fiction with Reservoir Dogs, then The Kill Bills, Jackie Brown and Inglourious Basterds and, to close off the week, Django Unchained with a palate cleanser of Death Proof.

MB: I know he only wrote it but I would include True Romance in your queue. But since we're talking about directors that keep me in the house, I say I could recuperate from kidney surgery watching a Woody Allen marathon. It would be a glorious week of laughter and drinking my food through a straw. If you have less time, pick any two of his films per decade from a stack of DVDs and you won't go wrong.

RC: On these cold blustery days when I really want to hunker down and avoid the outside, Sunset Boulevard is a go-to. The movie, not the street. No matter how many times I see it, I still get caught up in the "creeping paralysis" of greed and obsession of Billy Wilder's vision. "It's the pictures that got small." Not this one though.

MB: A good Quirk-A-Thon can also keep me indoors. Here's how it works: Choose a movie like Napoleon Dynamite, then, whenever one of the characters does something eccentric, quirky or mumbly, have a drink. I promise, you'll be warm in no time.

Cheesecake with diced strawberries and graham-cracker crumble. HARPERCOLLINS

Cheesecake is something we don't make often because with a yield of 12 pieces, we seem to be eating it for two weeks! Not only does the slow cooker guarantee a perfect texture to the cake (because the process prevents the cake from cracking), but also we use ramekins, which yield four portions. When ready to serve, we add a graham-cracker crumble and diced strawberries to make it taste like traditional cheesecake.

Directions

1. CHEESECAKE: Place a clean cloth in the bottom of the slow cooker to prevent the ramekins from shifting.

2. In a food processor, purée all the ingredients until smooth. Pour into four 125 ml (1/2-cup) ramekins. Place the ramekins in the cooker and carefully pour in enough hot water to come halfway up the sides of the ramekins.

3. Cover and cook on low from 1 hour and 15 minutes to

1 hour and 30 minutes or until firm and slightly puffed up. Remove the ramekins from the slow cooker and let cool. Cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate for at least 4 hours or until completely chilled.

4. CRUMBLE: With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 180°C (350°F). Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

5. In a bowl, combine the dry ingredients. Add the butter and mix until crumbly. With your fingers, drop the crumble in small pieces on the baking sheet. Bake, stirring twice during cooking, for about 15 minutes or until golden brown. Let cool.

6. STRAWBERRIES: Toss the strawberries with the sugar. Set aside for 5 minutes to macerate.

7. When ready to serve, garnish each ramekin with graham cracker crumble and strawberries.

Lounge-around lasagna

Use your noodles: Uncooked pasta makes lasagna even easier. HARPERCOLLINS

This lasagna, cooked entirely in the slow cooker, has become a classic at our house. And don't be afraid to use uncooked pasta; it really works, you'll see. Beware: Do not use precooked lasagna noodles for this recipe.

1. In a bowl, combine the meat, carrot, celery, mushrooms, and garlic. Season with salt and pepper. Set aside.

2. In the bottom of the slow cooker, spread 125 mL (1/2 cup) of tomato sauce. Cover with a layer of lasagna noodles. Break them if needed so they fit.

3. Spread one-third of the meat mixture over the noodles. Cover with 250 mL (1 cup) of tomato sauce and sprinkle with 75 mL (1/3 cup) of Parmesan. Cover with another layer of lasagna noodles. Cover with the ricotta cheese.

4. Continue with a layer of lasagna noodles. Add another third of the meat mixture.

5. Cover with another layer of noodles, the remaining meat mixture, 250 mL (1 cup) of tomato sauce, and the remaining 150 mL (2/3 cup) of Parmesan. Top with the remaining tomato sauce and sprinkle with the mozzarella cheese.

6. Cover and cook on low for 4 hours. Cooking time may vary depending on the type of

A fine kettle of fish. Succulent slow-cooked salmon with fennel

Salmon on a bed of rice. HARPERCOLLINS

Ingredients

- 250 mL (1 cup) vegetable broth
- 10 mL (2 tsp) anise liqueur (such as pastis or ouzo) (optional)
- 4 thick skinless salmon fillets
- 1/2 bulb fennel, stalks removed, thinly sliced, ideally on a mandoline
- 30 mL (2 tbsp) finely chopped fennel fronds
- Salt and pepper

I can hear you asking, "Why cook salmon in a slow cooker when it is so easy to grill?" I was skeptical as well. But because the slow cooker cooks with an even, moist heat, the texture of the salmon cooked this way is absolutely divine. I have rarely tasted such moist salmon. One of the most pleasant surprises in our test kitchen.

1. In the slow cooker, combine the broth and the liqueur, if using. Place the salmon fillets in the cooker and scatter the sliced fennel over them. Season with salt and pepper.

2. Cover and cook on low for about 1 hour and 15 minutes or until the salmon is just pink in the middle. Serve the salmon with the fennel and steamed rice. Garnish with the fennel fronds.

Not so fast! You could fall for a slow cooker

Feeding a big family or eating for one. There is a model out there for everyone and they now do more than ever

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

Walk through the small appliances aisle of a store and you may be amazed to see how many varieties of slow cookers there are. Here is a slow cooker primer for you to glance over if you are planning on purchasing one or need to update the one you already have

What size do I get?

Slow cookers range in size from very small (warmers) to extended family size. Ask yourself some questions before you buy: How big is my family? Do I want leftovers for lunch? Warmers or dippers are really just that: very small-sized slow cookers that have very few functions, which are to keep dips and sauces warm or to enjoy a fondue.

Types

- Two-quart (2 litres) slow cookers are great for small households of two people, take up very little space and they usually are round in shape.
- Four to 6 quart (4 to 6 litres) is the average for most slow cookers, leaving plenty of space to cook a variety of recipes for families of 4 to 6 people. These can be round or oval in shape.
- Larger slow cookers, 7 quart (7 litres) or more, are perfect for larger families or if you are serving food at a large gathering. These are typically large oval or rectangular in shape.

What shape is right for me?

If your family loves roasts and larger pieces of meat and poultry, you will want to look at an oval- or rectangular-shaped slow cooker. With the larger surface area you will be able to comfortably fit larger cuts and accommodate those types of recipes.

If soups and chunky stews are more up your alley, then a round slow cooker is what you'll want to buy.

How much do they cost?

Depending on the size, shape and function, the prices range from a mere $20 to more than $200. Most slow cookers have a stainless steel outer casing, but some are coloured or white, which will also affect the pricing.

What more can a slow cooker do?

Most slow cookers on the market have a basic function of low or high to cook with and a warm or hold feature so that if you are not ready to serve your meal you can keep it warm. With the digital features of some slow cookers, you can set the time to come on when you want and then it will automatically switch over to the warming feature once the achieved cooking is done.

Other things to consider

Convenience of having a removable stoneware is important for clean up (dishwasher safe) and serving. It's also great if you want to bring your meal to the table to enjoy without having the entire slow cooker attached to it. Having a tempered glass lid is helpful so you can peak in and see how things are progressing to eliminate steam escaping while cooking. If you will be travelling with it, look for a slow cooker that has travel clips to keep the lid secure while in transport.

What's new in slow cookers?

Here is where you might find the best reasons to purchase your slow cooker. The versatility of slow cookers, also now referred to as multi-cookers, can truly make or break your purchase. Some current features are the sauté or sear feature, which eliminates the need to brown meat or poultry in a skillet before adding it to the slow cooker.

Speeding up the cooking process is another feature now available that lets you get that slow-cooked taste in a fraction of the time. Steaming some foods in your slow cooker is yet another newer function on the newest models. With a steaming basket or tray you can have perfect tender dishes to serve to your family. Cooking rice or risotto can be another option in your slow cooker and also keep it warm while the rest of your dinner is complete.

Russia sets aside troubles, launches Sochi Olympics with a spirited ceremony

A crowning achievement of Vladimir Putin's Russia kicked off Friday with a celebration of its past greatness and hopes for future glory, most especially for a raucous group of Russian athletes who marched into the rollicking opening ceremony of the Sochi Olympics with a message.

To the best athletes in the world, who they've invited to the edge of the Black Sea to compete on ice and snow, amid concerns about terrorism and criticism of intolerance of gay people, they sang: You're "not gonna get us."

To begin the festivities, Russian TV star Yana Churikova shouted to a crowd still taking their seats: "Welcome to the centre of the universe!"

Shades of Vancouver: A technical glitch kept one of the Olympic rings from opening during the ceremony. PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the next two weeks, it certainly is for the 3,000 athletes who will compete in 98 events, more people and contests than ever at the Winter Games.

The show opened with a hiccup, as the lighting of the five Olympic Rings overshadowed the singing of the Russian national anthem. Five snowflakes on cables drifted together above the stadium, and four of them turned into Olympic rings — but the fifth never unfurled and they all failed to erupt into white flames as planned.

Also missing from the show: mention of Putin's repression of dissent and worries of terrorism and inconsistent security measures at the Olympics, which will take place just a few hundred miles away from the sites of an insurgency and routine militant violence.

For all the criticism, there was no shortage of pride at the ceremony in what Russia has achieved with these games. The head of the Sochi organizing committee, Dmitry Cher-

Tweeted

"I wish our Olympians the best of luck as they take on the world in Sochi."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper posted on his Twitter account

nyshenko, captured the mood of many Russians present when he said, "We're now at the heart of that dream that became reality."

"The Games in Sochi are our chance to show the whole world the best of what Russia is proud of," he said. "Our hospitality, our achievements, our Russia!"

Women's hockey star Hayley Wickenheiser carried the Maple Leaf to lead representatives from Canada's 220-athlete team. It's Canada's biggest team ever assembled for a Winter Games.

"To represent the best of Canada is such an honour, it's chilling," Wickenheiser said. "There is so much excitement."

Bomb threat

Hijacking attempt to Sochi foiled

A Ukrainian passenger on an Istanbul-bound flight claimed Friday there was a bomb on board and tried to hijack the plane to Sochi, Russia, where the Winter Olympics were kicking off, an official said.

According to NTV television, an F-16 fighter plane was scrambled as soon as the pilot signalled there was a hijacking attempt and escorted the plane to Istanbul's Sabiha Gokcen airport.

Turkey's state-run TRT television said authorities convinced the man to give himself up and he was taken into police custody.

There were 110 passengers on board the flight from Kharkiv, Ukraine.

Scotties

Homan sweeps round-robin

The first part of the Scotties Tournament of Hearts went perfectly for defending champion Rachel Homan.

The Canada skip from Ottawa led her squad to a perfect 11-0 round-robin record with a 7-3 victory over New Brunswick's Andrea Crawford (6-5) at the Maurice Richard Arena on Friday.

Homan will face Chelsea Carey's Manitoba rink (9-2) in the first-versus-second game Friday night. Carey clinched the No. 2 spot with a 6-4 victory over P.E.I.'s Kim Dolan (3-8).

Homan's rink is looking to become the first to go through the Scotties undefeated since Linda Moore in 1985. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brazil stadium construction kills third worker

A worker was killed in an accident outside the World Cup stadium in the Brazilian jungle city of Manaus, local organizers said Friday.

Organizers in charge of the city's preparations said the worker died while dismantling a crane that was used to install the roof of the Arena da Amazonia.

It is the third death of a worker in or near the stadium in Manaus.

PATRICK CHAN Figure skating

Chan is the odds-on choice among the men, trying for Canada's first gold medal in the Olympics. No, Brian Orser, Kurt Browning and Elvis Stojko didn't manage it.

That puts extreme pressure on the Ottawa native, who was upset at the Grand Prix Final by Japan's Yuzuru Hanyu, albeit by less than a point.

Chan also will be tested by Denis Ten of Kazakhstan and Javier Fernandez of Spain.

ALEX HARVEY Cross-country skiing

Harvey won gold, silver and bronze at the Tour de Ski and now has a total of 12 podium finishes at World Cup or world championship events. He's a good bet to win a medal.

DAVE DUNCAN Ski cross

The London, Ont., native had raced in several finals since joining the Canadian ski cross team in 2007 but had not won a World Cup until this season. He broke through last month with a win in Innichen-San Candido, Italy, and followed it up with another gold the next day.

A broken collarbone prevented Duncan from competing at the Vancouver Games, so he's been waiting a long time for this chance.

KAILLIE HUMPHRIES Bobsled

Humphries has been dominant on the World Cup circuit over the last two years. Humphries and Heather Moyse won Olympic gold four years ago and are favoured to repeat.

ALEX GOUGH Luge

Canada has competed in every Olympic luge competition since the Grenoble Games in 1968 but is still looking for its first medal. That drought could come to an end in Sochi.

Gough became the first Canadian to win a World Cup luge race in 2011 and she's enjoying another strong season. A luge relay has been added to the lineup for Sochi, and Canada could reach the podium in that event as well.

MARK McMORRIS Snowboarding

Slopestyle will make its Olympic debut in Sochi and McMorris is expected to be in the mix for gold. The Regina native will compete with a broken rib sustained at the recent X Games.

ATSUKO TANAKA Ski jumping

It has been over two decades since Canada had a legitimate medal threat in ski jumping. You have to go all the way back to Horst Bulau, who finished seventh at the 1988 Games in Calgary.

Women's ski jumping makes its Olympic debut in Sochi and Tanaka leads Canadian hopes. She finished fourth at a recent World Cup in Japan and is a good dark-horse pick for a medal.

KAETLYN OSMOND Figure skating

Osmond just turned 18 and is poised to lead a young crop of women's skaters in this country. The field will be stacked in Sochi, but Osmond could make a splash.

BRAD JACOBS Curling

Olympic success would cap a remarkable 12-month run for Jacobs and his Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.,-based rink.

They broke through on the men's curling scene last March by winning the Tim Hortons Brier, giving Northern Ontario its first national title since 1985. Jacobs skipped his team to a silver medal at the world championship a month later.

He earned the Sochi berth with an impressive undefeated run at the Olympic trials.

ERIK GUAY Alpine Skiing

The 2011 world downhill champion just missed the podium in his first two appearances at the Games. He's hoping the third time will give him that elusive Olympic medal.

Sochi censorship

Kripps says website blocked

Canadian bobsledder Justin Kripps says it appears his website was censored in Russia.

Attempts by The Canadian Press to access the website in Sochi brought up a message in Cyrillic, which says the site has been blocked because of a breach of Russian legislation.

"Looks like my website is censored in Russia, haha classic #SochiProblems I wonder if there's a camera in my room" Kripps tweeted. Kripps and his teammates became Internet stars when they posed for a photo in their underwear.

Koivu's ankle not healed in time

Minnesota Wild centre Mikko Koivu decided his surgically repaired right ankle has not healed enough to allow him to play for Finland in the Olympics.

He'll miss two Bruins games after leaving for Sochi early.

Adversity part of Canada's training

Women's hockey.

Coach's departure, slew of games and intense fitness regimen has given reigning gold-medal champs thick skin

Recognizing his players were physically and mentally spent, Kevin Dineen held out a credit card. Forward Jayna Hefford grabbed it.

Dineen's only condition that January night in St. Polten, Austria, was that all 21 players on the Canadian women's hockey team were involved in whatever they charged to the coach's plastic.

"He said 'one drink,'" Hefford said. "He didn't say how big though."

And so the Canadian women began refilling their empty tanks for the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, Russia.

Canada opens defence of its three straight gold medals in women's hockey Saturday against Switzerland.

The Canadians have played almost 50 games since they began training full time in Calgary in August.

The final three weeks of preparation were gruelling by design to harden them for Sochi. Games were sandwiched between stepped-up dryland training sessions.

And there were emotional stressors to boot.

The abrupt departure of Dan Church on Dec. 12 meant Canada was without a head coach less than two months out from the opening ceremonies. They adjusted on the fly to Dineen, who was fired by the Florida Panthers in November.

The hard training in combination with games was counterintuitive to Dineen.

"That's not the way I was used to doing my business," he admitted. "I think we were a tired bunch physically and mentally."

"That's the way the schedule was set up and from Day 1, I bought into what we were doing to prepare for the Olympics."

The jet-lagged Canadians lost 5-4 to a boys' under-18 team upon arrival in Austria. It was at that point Dineen gave the players two days off and the aforementioned credit card.

"Why did I hand over a credit card to Jayna?" Dineen said. "I think they might have been a little sensitive that the program had not had much success on the wins and losses to that point. I wasn't sweating it. I know they're prepared, I know they're ready. I know it hadn't been always fun for us, but the chance to go out in a different country and have a soda pop with one of your teammates is a pretty awesome night."

"Maybe I gave them a little nudge. You get around people in a different atmosphere and sometimes it changes the dynamics and conversations."

They won their next game in Austria 8-1 against a male under-20 team for their first victory under Dineen.

They arrived in Sochi last Sunday looking fresher and skating faster during the week.

"We didn't change anything in our plan because we were losing games," assistant coach Danielle Goyette said.

"Our goal is to win all the games at the Olympics and win the last one. We might have sacrificed some games this year, but we had to make sure we were peaking at the right time." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Outer limits of exhaustion

"I think we felt like we'd been run over by a truck."

Canadian defenceman Meaghan Mikkelson, on the team's final weekend before departing for Austria, the women lost to a midget triple-A team Jan. 17, rode the bikes hard for an hour after practice the following day and then had less than 24 hours to recover before an afternoon game Jan. 19.

Podium projection

Canada's goal is to win more medals than any other country in Sochi. Here are The Canadian Press's medal predictions for Canada:

- Alpine skiing. Canada hasn't won an alpine medal since 1994, but downhillers Erik Guay, Manny Osborne-Paradis and Marie-Michele Gagnon should end the drought. Medal prediction: 2
- Biathlon. Jean-Philippe Le Guellec posted historic results in the last four years, but the field is so deep he'll need perfect racing and accuracy. Medal prediction: 0
- Bobsleigh. Kaillie Humphries and Heather Moyse are back to defend gold. Expect a medal. The men are capable of medals in two- and four-man. Medal prediction: 2
- Cross-country skiing. Alex Harvey is peaking at the right time. He and Devon Kershaw are podium threats in the team pursuit and the men's relay team is a contender. Medal prediction: 2
- Curling. Like hockey, it's not a question of whether Canada wins two medals in the sport, it's what colour? Medal prediction: 2
- Figure skating. Canada is a virtual lock in the new team event. Patrick Chan aims to be Canada's first Olympic men's champion. Ice dancers Tessa Virtue and Scott Moir are favourites. Medal Prediction: 3
- Freestyle skiing. The freestylers will be the driver of Canada's medal count. Defending moguls champ Alex Bilodeau and Mikael Kingsbury have dominated podiums since 2010. Medal prediction: 6
- Hockey. Canada and Russia are men's favourites. The women should meet the U.S. for gold again. Medal prediction: 2
- Luge. Luge is the Canadian sport that has come the furthest since 2010. Calgary's Alex Gough has broken up the domination of German women. Medal prediction: 2
- Nordic combined/ski jumping. Female ski jumpers compete in the Olympics for the first time. Among them are Canadians Atsuko Tanaka, Taylor Henrich. A medal is a longshot. Medal prediction: 0
- Short-track speedskating. Charles Hamelin and Marianne St-Gelais are strong medal contenders. Medal prediction: 5
- Skeleton. Sarah Reid, a bronze medallist at last year's world championship, is Canada's best chance. Medal prediction: 0
- Snowboard. Maelle Ricker is the reigning world and Olympic women's champion and Dominique Maltais is a consistent podium performer in boarder cross. Mark McMorris's momentum in slopestyle took a hit when he fractured a rib at the X Games. Medal prediction: 3
- Speedskating. The long-track team lacks the depth it once had. Christine Nesbitt of London is the defending champion in the women's 1,000 M, but hasn't medalled this season. The men's and women's pursuit teams are medal contenders. Medal prediction: 1
Canada's total medal prediction: 30

You have far too many things on the go and you run the risk of losing control. This would be a good time to get friends and family to help you out.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
The problems you are having with a new work routine are minor and likely to be short-lived, so don't let them annoy you. And don't let others tell you that you need to change course. They're wrong.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may have something urgent to say but now that Mercury, planet of communication, is moving retrograde you will find it hard to find the right words. It won't hurt to wait.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You can pretend that a money problem does not exist but you will have to come back to it soon, so you might as well deal with it now. You have spent far too much and need to save.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20
You will be in an remarkably forgiving mood over the next few days and that's good because there's a lot to forgive. The thing to remember is that you are not just forgiving for other people's benefit but also for your own. SALLY BROMPTON
